Building women’s global meaningful participation in the High Level Meeting on AIDS

The ATHENA Network and the Global Coalition on Women and AIDS initiated a global virtual consultation in nine languages, engaging approximately 800 women from over 95 countries, in order to provide a platform for women and girls - especially those of us living with and affected by HIV – to voice our priorities and vision for the future of the HIV response. The consultation aimed to take stock of women’s experiences of the measures in place to curb HIV to date; and to ensure women- and girls-centered input into the High Level Meeting on AIDS in June 2011.

In looking to the future, we recognize the centrality of women’s rights and gender equality to the success of the HIV response and reaffirm our shared commitment to women, girls, and gender equality in the context of HIV and AIDS. In these key regional messages, women and girls voice our vision for positive change. Our first message is to ensure that all women and girls are respected, engaged, and recognized in all the rich diversity of our multiple – often overlapping – identities: as women and girls living with and affected by HIV; young women; sex workers; lesbian, bisexual, or transgender women; migrant, refugee, or internally displaced women; women with experience of prison, drug use, caregiving, widowhood, and disabilities; and indigenous, rural, and urban women.

HIV PRIORITIES FOR POSITIVE CHANGE

as identified by women in Eastern Europe and Central Asia toward achieving Universal Access

- Ensure access to inclusive, holistic, and integrated HIV services, in particular harm reduction and sexual and reproductive health, for women and girls in all our diversity

“To ensure the funding of a primary HIV prevention program for women of childbearing age from general public, and not from certain target groups.”

- Promote dignity and rights for all women and girls, in particular those of us living with HIV, and eliminate stigma and discrimination

“Women from vulnerable groups can provide practical advice not found in any literature; this is always a new look and a new vision. In my particular personal opinion, women (who went through hell) should be maximally involved in the work.”

- Champion gender equality to accelerate women’s empowerment for equal access to education, employment, economic opportunities, and meaningful participation in decision-making

“Women’s movements already exist in Russia, which also include women living with HIV, and should be supported by their colleagues worldwide. Only joint international efforts will lead to the successful advancement of women in Russia, especially of those from vulnerable groups.”

“Women and girls are the key to achieving full rights and economic empowerment of women, and this is achieved only through a holistic approach.”

“Women and girls have to be respected and recognized in all the rich diversity of our multiple – often overlapping – identities: as women and girls living with and affected by HIV; young women; sex workers; lesbian, bisexual, or transgender women; migrant, refugee, or internally displaced women; women with experience of prison, drug use, caregiving, widowhood, and disabilities; and indigenous, rural, and urban women.”

“Women and girls need to have full access to HIV services, including harm reduction services, in a non-judgmental and non-exploitative manner; and to have the necessary knowledge to understand the importance of personal responsibility in prevention.”

“Women and girls need to have access to information about HIV, to know the risk factors, and to be able to protect themselves and at the same time be able to protect their partners.”
Concluding Comments

The virtual consultation was developed with the ethos and intent of democratizing international processes – and to provide a vehicle whereby women and girls from all walks of life and in all regions of the world can have their say on the achievements, challenges, and opportunities for change as the global community looks to the 2011 High Level Meeting on AIDS.

What we have learned through the development of the consultation and through our analysis of what women are saying is simply that women seek and are thirsty to be engaged and viewed as equal, active stakeholders and as agents of change rather than as subordinate, passive recipients. The responses we have received demonstrate that women want to enjoy opportunity, independence, sexual and physical autonomy – and as such, women seek an HIV response that is holistic, shared sector-wide, gendered, comprehensive, equitable, and deeply rooted in human rights. Women all over the globe are taking initiative and are on the frontlines of the response, implementing programs with their own capacity, and bringing about change in their communities.

The most affected women and girls must be most central to the response, and as history has shown us repeatedly where true social transformation has taken place, if these same women’s visions and aspirations were adequately supported, then the aspirations of us all would fall into place.
